Outlook Part 1: Permanent and Non-Cyclical Long-Term Drivers

Aging Populations

This is primarily a developed market phenomenon. The cohort of people over 60 is increasing rapidly and an older demographic spends significantly more money on healthcare needs.

Developing Markets

China and India's healthcare expenditures going back to 2000 have been growing at about 14% compound annual growth rate, almost triple that of the United States but in absolute terms still a fraction of the developed world. As wealth increases over time, there is a disproportionate amount of that wealth that is expended on healthcare.

Technological Innovation

Includes robot assisted surgeries, new medical devices, pharmaceutical and bio-pharmaceutical drugs. We believe we're in the early innings of a very long game of innovation and discovery.

Outlook Part 2: Shorter-term Catalysts and Risks

Healthcare is a superior good. Low valuations.

The healthcare sector has consistent earnings in good times and bad. It is a 'superior good', something we need no matter what the economy is doing. The sector also has visibility at a time of significant uncertainty in the broader markets. Yet, the price to earnings ratio compared to the market is at a very large discount.

Inflation Resistant Sector

Large-cap healthcare companies have unique advantages in an inflationary environment. They have low commodity price exposure, high margins, financial moats and dominant market share.

Innovation in obesity related drugs drives growth & significant benefits

Global obesity impacts millions worldwide. These drugs could play a pivotal role in preventative healthcare. Market-Research.biz recently estimated that the weight loss industry, already valued at over $280 billion, could potentially soar to over $500 billion by 2032.
